FRED DOUGLASS AGAIN - F. ed Douglass delivered an address last night at the emancipation celebration in Philadelphia, He said he had been looking at the question of the colored race from a political standpoint, and he had seen some things that disturbed him very much. He objected to calling the Southern question a "negro problem," because it was untrue, misleading, and had a tendency to obstruct the path of duty and truth. It shifted the burden from the na-tion and placed it upon the shoulders of the daily at Harrisburg with through Sleepers for Louisville and Memphis. As this seemed all right, the money was paid over and the negro went off with the jugs down the hollow. In a short time a whistle was heard, and all made a rush for the whisky. Soon the jugs were reached, but a howl went up from that crowd. Not a drop was in any of the jugs. A search was made for the negro, but he could not be found.

SUICIDE OF A YOUNG LADY .- Miss Fannie Heldman, daughter and only child of George Heldman, a respected German citizen of Greenville, N. C., last night broke from her father's house and ran a distance of several blocks and slipped softly into Reedy river, evading all persons who were in close pursuit of her. Her body was re-covered half an hour later, close to the bank and in water so shallow that she could have put her head above it by rising to her knees She suddenly became insane a few weeks ago while making final preparations for her marriage to a prominent young attorney of Greenville, and had been kept in her room by her parents ever since. While pursuing her last night her father, who is an old man, fell through a railroad trestle he was cross ing the river on, broke several of his tibs, and was otherwise seriously hurt. He had barely been carried into his house by one squad of men when the other party, from a HEO. McBURNEY & SON. squad of men when the other party, from a different part of the city, reached the door with the daughter's lifeless body. Miss-Heldman was about 25 years old.
